TO FIDIC ASPAC MEMBER ASSOCIATIONS

Ladies and Gentlemen,

FIDIC will publish the FIDIC Infrastructure Report 2009 at the FIDIC 2009 London Conference, see:

www.fidic.org/infrastructurereport

In essence the 52-page report is saying:

“As the custodians of existing infrastructure and the developers of future infrastructure, consulting engineers recognise a responsibility to institute a dialogue with the rest of society on the main issues that face mankind today: population growth, climate change, urbanisation, energy, and water.

The industry recognises that it needs to be more vocal about the things that are considered to be mistakes, and equally vocal about those things that are considered to be advances if improvements are to be made promptly and effectively.

The FIDIC Infrastructure Report 2009 aims to provide an overview of the main infrastructure issues that the world now faces. Having established the overall challenges, and the need to address these challenges in a way that is sustainable, each aspect of infrastructure is addressed individually.

In each section of the report the issues that are most important have been identified, not only the challenges which have to be addressed but also examples of constructive solutions. The report has deliberately been produced in a form that provides the opportunity for future updates and for progress to be addressed within each aspect of infrastructure.”

The report is a major milestone for FIDIC and for the industry. It will be published as a series of web pages on FIDIC.org after the conference, with links to sources. Member Associations may however wish to purchase copies of the printed version for distributing to members. The price per copy is Euro 20 less 25%. Please let me know as soon as possible if your association wishes to order copies, and how many.
